THINK BIG GO LONG

Long handles for better experiences

At Viefe we understand cupboards as being a versatile space. On the one hand they are furniture as shelter, the place where we put clothes and objects that are reminders of our lives. On the other hand, they are furniture as action, where we keep kitchen and work accessories and other general things.

Opening them is a daily activity that becomes something more when we accompany them with adequate handles.

FLAPP WOOD

INTERFER

The warmth of straight lines

The new Flapp handle, created by the designer Frank Person, pays homage to the roofing on traditional wooden porches and the pleasant shelter that they provide. Its shape in the form of a flap is welcoming to the user and makes it easy to use. The warmth of the wood and the smoothness of its slightly rounded edges converts it into a classic model which establishes a kind of fashionable dialogue between itself and cupboards of all different styles.

INTERFER

Flapp is a versatile model that adapts perfectly to both kitchen and office furniture.

Flapp's version in light oak wood gives the cupboards a minimalist aesthetic close to the Nordic style. However, Flapp in the walnut version gains sobriety since its dark tone adds a more classic nuance to the cupboards without losing its natural elegance.

FLAPP ALUMIN

Linearity for an industrial style

The new Flapp handle in the aluminium version becomes an industrial-style element that adds modernity and contrast to the cupboards where it is installed. Designed by Frank Person, its flap shape “welcomes” the user and makes it easy to use. Its slightly rounded edges give it character and, at the same time, a timeless elegance.

WING

Flying elegance

To create the profile of the new Wing handle, the designer Alexis Vivet was inspired by the open flaps on the first light aircraft which signified an important advance in their manoeuvre. The singular, geometric shape of this collection of long handles adapts to the side of doors with both class and distinction. The multiple finishes mean it can be combined with all types of cupboards, giving wings to creativity.

The design of the Wing model elevates and sophisticates the aesthetic of the furniture where it is installed.

Wing's four finishes allow it to be placed in both cupboards with contemporary aesthetics and in vintage cupboards that require a touch of modernity. The new brushed brass cava brings light to surfaces, and it can be combined with all kinds of wood and laminates.

A minimal dance

The timeless elegance of the bars used by ballet dancers was the starting point for the Kaschkasch studio to create the new line of handles known as Eto. Attracted by the expression exuded by contemporary dance and by the simplicity of the bars where ballet dancers reahearse for hours, they have developed this collection of minimalist handles which “dance” an infinite dance upon the cupboard.

INTERFER

The Eto in walnut wood transmits elegance and sobriety to the cupboards where it is placed. The oak wood version gives a fresh and casual look. And the modern version in black wood requires a point of daring and transgression that does not go unnoticed.

RILLE

The lay of the land can give surprising results

The name of this handle comes from the word “Rille” which in german means slot or furrow. Slots are precisely the essence of this design, the element on which its functionality depends. When creating it, the designer, Patricia Roig, wanted to add a distinctive feature to such a simple shape as a cylinder to give it visual personality, while at the same time improving its grip.

The long version of the Rille handle can adapt to rustic surroundings that require more presence and solidity to balance out other elements either in bedrooms living rooms or kitchens. Despite its strong presence, the aluminium makes it light and functional. An accessory that incorporates current fashions into its design.
